In Focus - Philip Cleminson

My name is Philip Cleminson and I am a street photographer.

I was born in London but now live in the country in the East of England. Apart from photography, my major passion is travel and so I love to combine the two things. When I can't travel I tend to shoot in London as it is the nearest hot location. I am relatively new to the world of photography.

I bought my first DSLR in April 2013 and after extensive failures took a workshop on how to use in June of that year with the Guardian Newspaper.

I very soon realised that I enjoyed shooting people (in the photographic sense). I discovered the genre of street photography on face book and have been posting there ever since. Lots of hours, lots of cameras, lots of workshops, lots of study and lots of shooting later what you see in this magazine are some of my favorited shots. My major influences include Garry Winogrand, Robert Doisneau and Saul Leiter and the wonderful group In-public who have helped in shaping my view of the wonderful world of Street photography.
